1. An airfield, about 1,000 feet square, most of which was destroyed, was located between KRALJEVAC (Y 27/D 59) and the magnesium works situated northeast of the town. It was bordered by this plant on the east and by the railroad line and road to KRAGULEVAC (Y 28/D 52) on the south.
2. The intact quarters were occupied by an air force unit, the soldiers of which were given infantry training. There were no enclosures. Yugoslavs did clearing work on the field.
3. Infantry training was done with the following German "34" and "42" machine guns as well as with 80-mm mortars and 50-mm antitank guns.

25X1A [REDACTED] Community. The KRALJEVAC airfield which was heavily damaged by U.S. forces, was reconstructed after the war. The reported location of the field is in accordance with available records. According to a report of September 1946, there were no hangars at the airfield. An administration building and three barracks are located on the western field borders. There is no concrete runway. It is not assumed that an air unit is stationed in KRALJEVAC.
